A wide range of wireless and wireline service providers, international carriers, submarine cable operators, IP telephony service providers, investors and communications business owners rely on Jennifer's decades of experience in communications regulation and licensing.

Jennifer's interest in communications started in college at the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She then focused her legal studies on communications issues at the Columbus School of Law in Washington DC and its Institute for Communications Law Studies.

Jennifer now counsels her clients on a broad range of issues, including rulemakings and other proceedings before the FCC. She also helps established operators and new market entrants navigate the myriad of state and federal regulatory compliance requirements associated with starting and continuing successful businesses. Jennifer has helped secure approvals for dozens of mergers and acquisitions of telecommunications companies from the FCC and state utility commissions. She also assists clients with national security reviews conducted by the Team Telecom group of Executive Branch agencies, including the negotiation of security mitigation arrangements with Team Telecom.
