Whether working with large investor-owned utilities, small marketers, or state agencies, Michael helps clients navigate the federal energy regulatory system. He is particularly involved with electric sales and transmission issues that arise under the Federal Power Act and Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act. He assists clients with matters involving sales of electric energy at market-based and cost-based rates, interconnection of generating facilities, the acquisition and sale of power projects, and related regulatory requirements before FERC. Well-versed in the issues facing this ever-evolving industry, Michael uses a detail-oriented approach to help clients implement solutions and meet their goals.
